Preface	11
1. THEORETICAL FRAMEWORK.....	13
1.1. Introduction	13
1.2. Model variations.....	13
1.3. Formal structures of segments.....	14
1.4. Government and licensing	15
1.5. Element Theory	16
1.6. Substantive complexity and the governing properties of segments	18
1.7. Phonological processes in GP	19
2. CONSONANT MUTATIONS	21
2.1. Introduction	21
2.1.1. Consonant mutations	21
2.1.2. The phonological system of Old Irish	23
2.1.3. Old Irish initial lenition	27
2.1.4. Element-based approach to lenition	32
2.1.5. Old Irish initial nasalization	36
2.1.6. Nasalization in terms of elements	37
2.2. The history of leniting and non-leniting contexts	39
2.2.1. Introduction	39
2.2.2. The history of lenition	40
2.2.3. Non-leniting contexts	43
2.3. Non-leniting environments and pre-Old-Irish adjustment processes	45
2.3.1. Non-leniting definite articles	45
2.3.2. h -prefixation	47
2.3.3. t -prefixation as a consequence of h -prefixation	50
2.3.4. The floating high tone and the origin of the Irish [f]	53
2.3.5. The high tone and the lenition [s → f]	57
2.3.6. The high tone and the origin of the Irish tense sonorants	59
2.3.7. Non-leniting environments – summary	69
2.4. Leniting environments and pre-Old Irish adjustment processes	70
2.4.1. Leniting definite articles	70
2.4.2. Leniting articles before lenited non-dental obstruents	73
2.4.3. Vowel-initial words after leniting articles	74

2.4.4. Leniting articles in front of lax sonorants	75
2.4.5. Articles before lenited [s] and t -prefixation	80
2.4.6. Leniting articles in homorganic contexts	82
2.4.7. Leniting and non-leniting contexts – summary	84
2.5. The history of nasalizing contexts	85
2.5.1. Introduction	85
2.5.2. Historical causes of nasalization	85
2.5.3. n -prefixation	89
2.5.4. Nasalization of voiced stops	92
2.5.5. Voiceless stops in nasalizing contexts	94
2.5.6. Voiceless fricatives in nasalization environments	95
2.5.7. Resonants in nasalizing contexts	97
2.5.8. Nasalization – summary	99
2.6. Conclusions	99
 3. CONSONANT CLUSTERS IN OLD IRISH
– GOVERNING RELATIONS BETWEEN SEGMENTS	101
3.1. Introduction – Old Irish consonant clusters	101
3.1.1. Word-initial consonant clusters	103
3.1.1.1. Radical word-initial consonant clusters	103
3.1.1.2. Word-initial clusters in leniting contexts	104
3.1.1.3. Nasalization of word-initial clusters	107
3.1.2. Word-final consonant clusters	108
3.1.3. Binary sequences in word-medial position	111
3.1.4. Triconsonantal word-medial clusters	113
3.2. A GP analysis of consonant clusters	114
3.2.1. Introduction	114
3.2.2. The element representations of Old Irish consonants	115
3.2.3. Word-initial stop+sonorant sequences	116
3.2.4. The chronology of lenition	117
3.2.5. Structures for geminates and s +stop clusters	120
3.2.6. Structures for stop+sonorant clusters	121
3.2.6.1. Decomposition of RIO in voiced stop+sonorant sequences ...	121
3.2.6.2. Lenition of intervocalic voiced stops	123
3.2.6.3. Definition of a leniting context	124
3.2.6.4. Detailed chronology of lenition	125
3.2.6.5. Lenition of voiceless stops	126
3.2.7. The development of s +sonorant clusters	128
3.2.8. f +liquid clusters in prehistory	132

3.2.9. s+cluster combinations	133
3.2.10. Word-initial clusters – summary	133
3.2.11. Rising-sonority word-medial clusters	134
3.2.12. Subsequent epenthesis in rising-sonority word-medial clusters ...	136
3.2.13. The development of word-medial falling-sonority clusters	138
3.2.14. The development of word-final falling sonority clusters	139
3.2.15. The structure of tense sonorants	142
3.2.16. The prehistoric development of sonorant+obstruent sequences ..	144
3.2.17. The development of Irish vowel epenthesis	150
3.2.18. Word-final clusters in Irish poetry	152
3.2.19. Phonological representations of rhyming groups	155
3.2.20. Prehistoric rhyming patterns at work	158
3.2.21. Word-medial falling-sonority clusters – conclusion	160
3.2.22. Word-medial triconsonantal sequences	162
3.2.23. Morphological boundaries and ternary clusters	165
3.2.24. Word-final sequences – conclusion	168
3.3. Chapter summary	168
 4. OLD IRISH SHORT VOWELS AND CONSONANT QUALITIES	171
4.1. Introduction	171
4.2. Vowels in stressed syllables and vocalic alternations	172
4.3. A GP analysis of vocalic alternations in stressed syllables	174
4.3.1. Vocalic alternations [i – e] and [u – o] in open syllables	174
4.3.1.1. Historical causes of [i – e] and [u – o] alternations	175
4.3.1.2. A GP account of [i – e] and [u – o] alternations	176
4.3.2. Vocalic alternation [a – e]	181
4.3.2.1. Historical causes of the alternation [a – e]	182
4.3.2.2. Palatalization in the prehistory of Irish	184
4.3.3. Vocalic alternations [i – e] and [u – o] in closed syllables	186
4.3.3.1. Historical causes of [i – e] and [u – o] alternations	187
4.3.3.2. Different interpretations of [i – e] and [u – o] alternations	189
4.3.4. Quality of Consonants	189
4.3.4.1. Traditional views on Old Irish consonant qualities	189
4.3.4.2. Modern views on consonant qualities	192
4.3.4.3. A note on history and orthography	196
4.3.5. The hypothetical short diphthongs	198
4.3.5.1. The alternation [i – e] revisited – the short diphthong [iu]	198
4.3.5.2. The short diphthong [au] and the alternation [a – u]	199
4.3.5.3. The short diphthong [eu] and the non-alternating vowels	202

4.3.6. Other prehistoric harmony effects	206
4.3.7. Prehistoric element interactions – headedness	208
4.3.7.1. Primitive Irish changes and structures of front vowels	209
4.3.7.2. The element structures of Primitive Irish back vowels	212
4.3.7.3. The Primitive Irish [a]	213
4.3.7.4. The Primitive Irish non-alternating [e] and [o]	214
4.3.7.5. Element representations of vowels	216
4.3.8. Vowels in stressed syllables and vocalic alternations – summary	217
4.4. Word-medial vowels in unstressed syllables	218
4.4.1. Approaches to the shape of vowels in unstressed syllables	219
4.4.1.1. Vowels in unstressed syllables – traditional view	219
4.4.1.2. A modern approach to unstressed vowels	220
4.4.1.3. Problems with approaches to unstressed vowels.....	222
4.4.2. A GP analysis of word-medial unstressed vowels	224
4.4.3. Consonant quality agreement in syncopated words	228
4.4.4. Vowels in unstressed syllables – summary	229
4.5. Alternating long vowels and consonant qualities	229
4.6. Chapter summary	232
Conclusion	234
